

What's more fun than one SnapiTTM by KitchenHappyTM?
by Mary Ellen Donat

Girls: they wanna have fun. And they found it at Royer's Pharmacy in Ephrata, Pennsylvania.

Rebecca Buckwalter from Lititz, Pennsylvania was spending the day shopping with two good friends. The three stopped in at Royer's to buy greeting cards. As they waited in the checkout line, they spotted the SnapiTTM display.

"We started playing with them," Rebecca said. "We had so much fun I'll bet we were there for about 10 minutes just playing with them. The sales clerk said 'You girls are having just too much fun.' It just snowballed. One of us bought one, then I bought two . . ."

In the car, still enamored by the single-hand servers, the trio began to talk about ways they could use Snapis ("Who'd have ever thought about it for ice?") and other family and friends who would have fun with them, too. Back inside Royer's they went.

"We each ended up purchasing four! Every color."

Rebecca said that once she got home and began using the Snapis, she just had to write to KitchenHappyTM to let them know how much she loved their product. And not just because they're the fun way to serve food.

"PRAISE THE LORD for a really neat product which is MADE IN AMERICA!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!" she wrote. "That is the main reason we bought them. One of us spied the American flag (on the display) and the 'Made in the USA' written on the backside of the header. GOOD FOR YOU ALL! May you prosper and branch out with other useful, have-to-have products."

While Rebecca said the main reason she and her friends decided to buy their first rounds of Snapis because they are made in America, they also liked its design.

"They're so cool; just the greatest, neatest, coolest things we have seen. I like that you can use it with one hand and there's not two pieces to deal with. I like how you can close it; it's not continually flapping open. I can't wait to give them as gifts. Hey, when you find something good, you want to pass it around."

Double the fun.
